Kameron Adams brings a strong academic and research background in environmental and regulatory law to the firm's Business Law Transactions Practice Group. While earning his J.D. from the University of Iowa College of Law, Kameron served as a research assistant for several professors, conducting in-depth legal research on topics such as pipeline litigation, eminent domain, and the Takings Clause of the U.S. Constitution. His work extended to the intersection of law and public health, where he tracked cannabis regulations and background check policies for long-term care providers across U.S. states and territories.

Kameron gained practical legal experience as a summer associate at Foley & Lardner LLP, where he worked on various business law transactions. His diverse research background, combined with his hands-on experience at a leading law firm, equips him with the skills and knowledge to navigate complex legal issues.
