Jeffrey “Jeff” Buak is of counsel with nearly 30 years of experience in real estate and commercial transactions, as well as substantial experience in local government representation. Jeff’s successful career is evidenced by his frontline positions in both local and national law firms. He actively manages his clients’ expectations by working to keep the clients informed and up to date on their matters.

Jeff is a member of the firm’s Real Estate Practice Group and his practice is focused on real estate transactions, with an emphasis on land use and zoning. He describes his practice as primarily “horizontal development,” which would include site location, contract negotiation, due diligence, acquisition, and entitlements. Although horizontal development is his primary cornerstone, he also has exceptional experience in vertical development as well.

Prior to joining Foley and Lardner LLP, Jeff was a partner in five prominent firms in Florida, served as a city attorney to four different cities in Florida and represented several special and redevelopment districts.
