Tom Krysa advises clients in securities enforcement and litigation matters, government investigations, class actions, and complex commercial disputes. As a former federal prosecutor and SEC trial lawyer, Tom uses his extensive government experience to resolve his clients' problems short of government action while at the same time preserving their interests, should litigation and trial become necessary. He is a partner in the firm's Securities Enforcement & Litigation Practice and a member of the Environmental, Social, and Corporate Governance (ESG) Team.

Tom represents clients in matters involving the SEC, DOJ, FINRA, PCAOB, CFTC, and other federal and state regulators and self-regulatory organizations. He conducts internal investigations for companies, audit committees, and boards of directors. He also represents clients in class actions and complex commercial litigation in federal and state courts.

While at the SEC, Tom served in several capacities — as a staff attorney, trial attorney, supervisory trial counsel, and ultimately as associate regional director in charge of enforcement and trials for the Denver regional office. In these roles Tom litigated and supervised matters involving insider trading, financial fraud, broker-dealer and investment adviser misconduct, offering fraud, market timing, market manipulation, and auditor negligence. Prior to the SEC, Tom was a federal prosecutor for the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., prosecuting criminal tax and other white-collar matters in federal district courts.
