Lauren M. Loew helps clients identify risk in existing relationships and protect them in the event of disputes. A partner and litigation lawyer for Foley & Lardner LLP, Lauren utilizes her analytical background to gain a full understanding of clients' products, operations, and business goals. She uses that in-depth knowledge to tenaciously defend manufacturers and automotive companies in supply chain and product-related litigation and health care entities in commercial disputes, antitrust, and regulatory matters.

"Ms. Loew is completely responsive and uniquely situated to react quickly."

"She understands our goals and pulls together the resources we need." BTI Client Service All-Stars 2022

As clients move from traditional brick-and-mortar industries into new delivery spaces, Lauren helps them mitigate liability and navigate problems with vendors or suppliers that are disruptive to business operations and growth. She advises entities that operate in challenging regulatory environments and guides them in making the best decisions for their businesses. Lauren regularly counsels clients on the legal landscape of privilege protections and how it applies to their companies.

Lauren's practice spans a wide range of complex litigation matters and business disputes, including multidistrict class action defense, products liability defense, product defect claims, business warranty and contract matters, complex commercial arbitrations, advertising/misrepresentation claims, commercial contract disputes, breach of fiduciary duty and non-compete cases, supply chain management disputes, and post-acquisition litigation. She represents clients in state and federal courts and arbitrations around the country.

A member of the Business Litigation & Dispute Resolution Practice; Automotive Industry Team; and Environmental, Social, and Corporate Governance (ESG) Team, Lauren serves as co-editor of Dashboard Insights, the firm's Automotive Industry Team blog.

Lauren Loew has tried cases and arbitrations, evidentiary hearings, and emergency injunctive claims for clients in jurisdictions around the country. Lauren utilizes her analytical background to gain a full understanding of her clients' products, operations, backgrounds, and business goals, and she formulates strategies from the beginning of a matter through trial. Lauren identifies strengths and weaknesses so her clients can make informed decisions at each step of the litigation. She has pursued eminent domain, breach of contract, fiduciary duty, and supply disputes to conclusion, including jury and bench trials as well as multi-week arbitration hearings. She has both obtained and defeated temporary restraining orders and obtained permanent injunctive relief on behalf of clients, quickly mobilizing when her clients need it most. Lauren coaches mock trial and is a member of the trial bar of the Northern District of Illinois.
