Matthew Tedder is an associate and business law attorney with Foley & Lardner LLP. Matthew is based in the Orlando office where he is a member of the Transactions Practice Group and supports the Capital Markets & Public Company Advisory practice. Prior to entering the legal profession he worked as a licensed CPA for a Big Four accounting firm. During law school, Matthew served as legal extern for Judge Irick in the Middle District of Florida. He also served as a summer associate for two Florida law firms.

Matthew focuses on securities, corporate governance, and general corporate law, with a concentration on representation of public companies. His experience includes advising and counseling of boards of directors and corporate senior management of public and private companies on the disclosure requirements under the federal securities laws; compliance with SEC and stock exchange requirements; corporate governance best practices; and general transactional matters.
