Jay Yoon is a litigation associate in Foley's Dallas office. He spent two summers with the firm, and he also interned with the U.S. Department of Justice in its Money Laundering and Asset Recovery Section and Austin U.S. Attorney's Office. Jay gained experience across a broad range of legal matters during his internships, including complex commercial disputes, federal government investigations, and white-collar criminal trial proceedings.

Jay graduated from The University of Texas School of Law, where he was a member of the Texas Law Review and won the law school's Strasburger Advanced Mock Trial Competition. He received his undergraduate degree in finance from Southern Methodist University. Before law school, he served his country for six years as an artillery officer in the U.S. Marine Corps, completing multiple deployments throughout the Middle East and Asia.
